

Dear Friend of IJM Canada,

You made 2017 an amazing year. Thank you!

This is the year IJM completed the 2017 Vision. When we launched this Vision ten years ago, we had an audacious dream: To rescue thousands, protect millions, and prove that justice for the poor is possible. And with God's help and yours, we've done it.

Globally, in 2007, we saw 1,668 children, women and men rescued from slavery and violence. In 2017, we saw 4,616 individuals rescued as a result of work by IJM and our trained partners. In fact, we estimate that, today, IJM teams worldwide are helping make communities safer for more than 150 million people who are vulnerable to violence and oppression. Most notably, we convincingly demonstrated that our approach works. We proved that justice for the poor is possible.

Over the same period of time, IJM Canada itself has experienced dramatic growth. In 2007, our revenue was $524, 681 and we supported one field office. By 2017, revenue was $6,421,577 and we supported (in full or in part) seven of IJM's 17 field offices.

Encouraged by that success, we are launching our 2030 Vision: to rescue millions, protect half a billion, and equip justice systems to shut down the business of slavery and violence—making justice for the poor unstoppable. But we can't do this alone. We're rallying Canadians like you to help. By 2030, we want to see a different world where one nation after another will step up to protect the poor and bring about global change.

I've had the incredible opportunity of providing leadership to IJM Canada for the past 12 years. My greatest joy year after year has been watching Canadians from coast to coast—young and old, women and men, churches, foundations, businesses and community groups—respond in creative, sacrificial and consistent ways to our urgent appeal to help us protect the poor from violence. We showed up when we needed to!

I'm so encouraged by everything IJM Canada has achieved and I know the organization will continue its bold trajectory toward the 2030 Vision. I am immensely proud of the work we have done together.

With Gratitude,

ED WILSON

Executive Director, IJM Canada

HIGH SCHOOL DUO USES BAKE SALE BUSINESS TO END SLAVERY

At IJM Canada, we've seen our fair share of fundraisers. But the ones that seems to be the most popular almost always involve food. The Baking for Freedom campaign is no different. Grace and Sarah are a dynamic duo determined to do their part to end slavery.

After learning about the atrocities of human trafficking, these young women started a bake sale business to raise awareness and to fight for the freedom of children trapped in slavery. With the help of their friends, Grace and Sarah have organized six bake sales so far and have raised more than $1600.

"We want to fundraise and reach our goal of $8,200—the approximate cost of funding a rescue mission to help children in slavery," Sarah shared with us.

Grace and Sarah, along with countless other supporters, are proving that you're never too young to make a difference in the work of justice.

PROM WITH A PURPOSE

Prom With A Purpose started when Bethany Nolson, a grade 12 student at the time, became disillusioned with the superficial nature of the traditional high school prom. Before she knew it, she was planning an alternative year-end celebration for students who felt compelled to put their time and money towards more than a date, a dress, and a dance.

PWAP has hosted four events over the past five years, raising thousands of dollars to protect the vulnerable from violence through the work of IJM and other anti-trafficking organizations. Now, Bethany is in university earning her degree in children's studies and human rights. She has high hopes for the future of Prom With A Purpose.

"Our dream is for schools and youth groups to take this campaign on," she shared.

"I just keep my feet moving and wait to see where the adventure goes. I know it's going to be hard, it might be difficult, but if you just keep moving things are going to happen."

SOCCER, SOLIDARITY, AND SOCIAL JUSTICE

Moses Latigo Opong, founder of The Justice Cup, was born and raised in Uganda before being adopted by a Canadian Ugandan family. In 2014, he began his Ph.D. in the department of Political Science at Western University, focusing on child soldiers in the context of post-conflict.

More than 7 years go, he had an idea to combine his love for soccer with advocacy for the work of IJM and in 2011, The Justice Cup was born.

The Justice Cup is a day-long summer soccer tournament with a two-fold purpose to raise awareness around issues of injustice and raise funds to support IJM's work in the field. "People enjoy that kind of intersection between playing a sport that they love for a good cause," Moses said.

Since The Justice Cup kicked off in 2011, Moses and his team of fundraisers have raised over $6000 to protect the poor from violence.

GIFTED ARTISAN KNITS ACCESSORIES TO PROTECT THE VULNERABLE

Christine Bisch is a justice warrior who channels her passion for protecting the poor into creating beautiful knitted accessories. After an eye-opening trip to the developing world, Christine started Freedom Knits to support the work of IJM Canada.

"It wasn't my first trip to the developing world, but it was the first time I travelled with an understanding of how violence affects the everyday lives of the poor," she shared with us in an interview. "I knew I had to find some way to keep my heart and mind stayed on justice issues."

After drawing inspiration from Etsy and revisiting the childhood knitting skills she learned from her grandmother, Christine soon opened her own Etsy shop.

Since 2013, she's been making hand and machine knit items with fair trade yarn from Uruguay and donating 100% of the proceeds from her sales to IJM Canada.

MAARKO, PHILIPPINES

A YOUNG BOY DREAMS OF BEING A SUPERHERO. BUT FIRST HE HAS TO ESCAPE THE EVIL IN HIS HOME

Maarko is a joyful, energetic little boy who loves superheroes and playing freeze tag with his friends. He is also a survivor of cybersex trafficking.

A British man paid Maarko's mother to set up a webcam in the privacy of her home so he could direct live sexual abuse of children over the internet.

The demand for shows spread to customers in other countries, including the U.S. and Canada, and Maarko, his 2-year-old sister, and cousins living next door found themselves trapped in a global network of abuse.

Cybersex trafficking is a devastating form of modern slavery made possible by the rapid spread of the internet. The criminals feel protected by the anonymity of the internet, but the crime is anything but virtual.

It's a real child being abused in real time.

After a six-month investigation, Maarko, his sister and cousins were rescued by IJM and Philippine authorities.

"I had mixed emotions while listening to their stories," an IJM social worker confessed after supporting Maarko throughout the rescue operation. "I could not understand the logic of these suspects in abusing their own family members. This is a very traumatizing experience for the victims and will definitely affect the way they look at their future."

The British man who organized the cybersex trafficking ring is behind bars, and Maarko's mother is awaiting her trial. IJM lawyers are supporting the case, and our social workers will continue counselling and meeting with Maarko and the other children at the safe shelter where they now live.

Maarko is learning and growing in his new life—free to be a child again.

You can watch Maarko's story, "SuperMaarko," at: https://www.ijm.ca/shut-down-cybersex-trafficking

SLAVERY SURVIVOR GIVES BIRTH TO HER FIRST CHILD BORN IN FREEDOM

It was the best kind of birth announcement. Bhoomika was Roopa's third child—but her first one born in freedom.

Roopa's first two pregnancies had occurred while she was a slave.

From when she was 6 to 19, Roopa worked in a south Indian brick kiln, where she endured backbreaking labour, degradation, sexual violence and the heartbreaking loss of a child.

Her first child had died in her womb after an accident in the kiln. The kiln owner had refused to let her go to a hospital.

Her second child was born healthy, partly because her husband, Banaiah, took on her work for her. Banaiah decided to make thousands of bricks by himself every day so Roopa could rest. He had told the kiln owner, "Even if you physically beat me, I will not allow my wife to move a stick..."

Looking into their baby boy's eyes, the couple decided they no longer could stay in slavery. He deserved a better life. It was time to escape. They knew the risks, but ran into the forest in desperation. Their escape eventually led to a rescue by police and IJM.

For the first time in 13 years, Roopa tasted freedom. IJM helped the family get the food, medical care and shelter they desperately needed.

In June of 2017, they had their third child.

This time, Banaiah's employer (a small manufacturing plant) gave him a month off to take care of Roopa and his new daughter. The couple was able to rest after returning from the hospital with their newborn. They were free to enjoy holding baby Bhoomika in their arms.

This birth felt so different from the last two. In the best way possible.

"I could not contain my joy," Banaiah said,

SEX TRAFFICKING SURVIVOR BLOSSOMS IN HER NEW LIFE

Nessa* was 16 when she was trapped in a brothel, on an island far from home. Run by an intimidating woman, the brothel was filled with girls who were lined up every evening for a night of abuse. Nessa said all the girls knew that the brothel owner had a gun.

IJM helped police rescue Nessa and eight other young women on December 4, 2008.

In March 2017—more than eight years after rescue—that scary brothel owner pled guilty. She faces 35 years in prison.

IJM persevered with Nessa for those eight years. We stood by her through the disappointments and victories, through delayed trials, judge reassignments and lawyer changes before Nessa heard the verdict.

Nessa's story of change mirrors a beautiful transformation taking place across her country.

In those same eight years, IJM also walked alongside the fragile Philippine justice system and advocated for change. Today, the country has a much stronger anti-trafficking law. In addition, 80% fewer minors are being sold for sex where IJM has worked with authorities.

Nessa's family, including her son born in 2016, live in a humble but happy home in a country that is now safer for children and women.

She said, "I could compare my life before at the brothel to a withered flower, a tree with falling leaves. However, today I am a colourful blooming flower, in a beautiful garden. I am a bountiful tree with many leaves and branches. All the leaves and branches are the people around me who are continually encouraging me and supporting me. The darkness has passed away, and my life today is colourful."

GROUNDBREAKING CONFERENCE IN MUMBAI ACCELERATES THE MOVEMENT TO END SLAVERY

Sadhna*, a sex trafficking survivor rescued by IJM, stood before the crowd of world leaders and dignitaries and recounted her story. Some had tears in their eyes as she talked about her journey from the brothel to her new life studying to become a social worker.

This incredible moment showed just how far India had come in recognizing survivors and fighting slavery. It happened during the inaugural International Conference on Women Trafficking in July. Organized by IJM and the Maharashtra State Commission for Women (MSCW), leaders from 13 countries, including the Second Lady of Ghana, weighed in how they could help end human trafficking.

The first conference of its kind in India, it signalled incredible momentum and collaboration on ending trafficking worldwide.

The conference also positioned IJM as a key partner to governments; leaders acknowledged that IJM's model of transforming justice systems is instrumental in eradicating slavery. Leaders discussed how law enforcement is the missing piece in ending slavery—slave owners and traffickers must know they will be held accountable. Strengthened police, courts and governments are the answer.

MSCW Chairperson Vijaya Rahatkar said, "The desire to bring people from various nations to this conference is not only to see the roots of the issue, but to seek a solution—to set the scene for collaboration on anti-trafficking. This conference can be a new beginning for the cause."

3,400 CHURCHES AROUND THE WORLD STAND TOGETHER FOR JUSTICE

On Sunday, September 24, 2017, over half a million people around the world went to church and heard about the reality of injustice. Twenty-one churches from Canada, along with congregations in the USA, Asia, Europe, and Africa devoted their Sunday services to the second annual Freedom Sunday—rallying together to send rescue to every child, woman and man living in slavery and violence.

"I believe that a watching world is waiting for the church today to say that we are unified and have one voice when it comes to fighting slavery," said Mark Wollenberg, IJM Canada Director of Church Mobilization.

In 2017, hundreds of sermons, testimonies, seminars, prayer nights and concerts around the world were dedicated to Freedom Sunday. The goal is to ensure all of God's people hear about slavery—and unite together as a global church to end it.

"I have certain resources at my disposal—I have my network, my passion, and my voice. And Freedom Sunday was the right opportunity to use all of those things to fight against human trafficking," said IJM volunteer Haley Recer.

Freedom Sunday originated in the United States in 2016 and caught fire abroad in 2017.

In Ghana alone, over 275 churches participated. Many of these churches are near the massive Lake Volta, where IJM works to rescue children enslaved in the fishing industry.

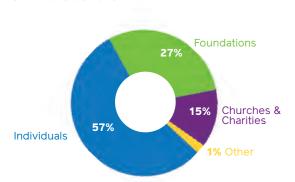

Earlier in the summer, one Ghanaian reverend challenged fellow church leaders to speak up through Freedom Sunday saying, "You all now know that you should rebuke the traffickers in your congregation, but you are afraid because they are the most influential members of your congregation. Well, you have a choice... do you want to be a faithful pastor or a popular pastor?"

God is calling his people to hear the cry of the oppressed and act on it. We believe the church is slavery's end—and this year we got closer.

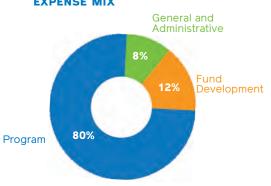

THE NEXT FREEDOM SUNDAY IS ON SEPTEMBER 23, 2018.
